This special law is repealed, will this satisfy our story cutting friends?

The editor was absent all of last week, hence the local columns of the HERALD were not as well filled with local news as usual.

SENATOR MILL'S BILL, repealing the special law, repealing a law of officers in this County, has passed the house and become law.

Some 15 or 20 counties have promulgated the passage of special laws, repealing the special law of officers—Some rising, and some modifying salaries. Now let reformers howl about special laws.

THE STATE PRISON INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE have reported. They consider the office of the State Prison of any importance or credit to the State. We believe they reported according to facts. We are nothing in the testimony implicating the officers in the least.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, elected by the people, and supposed to represent them directly, have refused to abolish the office of Railroad Commissioner. It is a useless office and should have been wiped out. This is a reform house, couldn't it see it?

DR. HILTZ, Representative from Houston County, made a very sensible speech on the prohibitory law, while it was before the House. The bill was defeated by a vote of 22 to 74. Dr. Hiltz, speech having much to do with the result.

MR. PORTER of the Potter investigating committee, has in his report, it is lengthy and reviews very fully the testimony taken before the committee. The majority of the committee come to the conclusion that on a fair count, the election of Florida and Louis are rightfully belonged to Tilden and Hendricks. It is a very candid document, and will be carefully read by the people of the United States.

THE LAST CARVER PASS contains biographical sketches of representatives Denny, Baxter and Hill—we this week, publish Capt. Mills—this completing the link.

HON. WM. H. MILLS.
Carver County, Minn., was born in Bellefonte, Centre County, Penn., March 3, 1826. In 1842, he removed to Ohio, learned the printers trade, and in 1845, went to Fort Wayne, Ind.; enlisted in the Third United States Infantry, in 1846, went to Mexico, served his time out under Jim Lane, and returned to the States in 1847, and the following year removed to Minnesota; was a member of the Minnesota Constitutional convention, in 1857, enlisted in Company C, Third Minnesota, was made captain of the company; served until the fall of 1862, then joined the Second Minnesota, and was mustered out in 1863. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Ottertail county, until 1869, then removed to Carver. Mr. Mills was formerly a Republican, but for the past eight years has acted with the Democratic party. He was a member of the Union in 1872, and lost full faith in the Union as the regular Democratic nominee in a triangular fight against a former Democrat and the Republican candidate, by 50 over the former and 20 the latter.

Carver County Its Towns and Some of the Early Settlers.

It may not be uninteresting to the old settlers to give the names of all those who resided here at the time of the organization of the County. The following are the names of the persons who voted at the first election in the County, as appears by the poll list as returned by the judges and clerks of election. There are many familiar names not on the list, who are known to have settled here about that time, such as James Slocum Jr., Dr. Kennedy, Chas. Bachmann, Constantine Dougherty, Patterson Brothers, J. A. Hillstrom and others. If they were here at that time it does not appear that they voted at the first election. The names are given in the numerical order as appears on the returns.

"tricking." May be we would give them the other side, eh?

Waterdown has enjoyed a number of lively ramays's, of late. One team ran through the streets, lately missing a number of people. No one was hurt however, but some pieces of the wagons were "pulled" into toupicals.

Fritz Lueder, has got out a number of "stills" charts of his "block" beer; they are just the "trickiest," in the business. He is enough to make John B. Gough's mouth water, to look at them.

Jim Young of Delano, had a country Jake who lives not far from here, filling the position of hostler, at his hotel; but after tending bar awhile and playing billiards, country Jake forgot where he belonged; so Jim proposed to play a game of billiards, to see who should run the hotel, and who should be hostler. Jim won the game, and now, said he, you belong in the stable. Since that, Jim owns the hotel. Sorter novel.

The following Arithmetic problems, etc., have been sent us by J. Aug. Rice, of Laketown, for publication.

1. What would every one like to be, and still no one wants to be?
2. When is a door not a door?
3. Who was the first whistler and what time did he whistle?
4. Which apples don't grow on a tree?
5. What goes into the water and don't become wet?
6. What is it that goes over the water, and yet stands perfectly still?
7. For 6 doz. eggs I sold 2 eggs 2 cents more than, for the same price, for 4 doz and one egg.
How many eggs could one buy for $5.00?
8. A teacher proposed the following question, for solution, to his class: "I have, at present, 3 times as many boys as girls; at present, 8 boys and 8 girls will be confirmed, when I shall retain 5 times as many boys than girls. Of how many boys and girls did the school consist?"
9. Somebody had 14 birds, of which $8.00.
How much water must be mixed with the lot, to sell a bird, for $5.00?

Febr. 28th 1879.

Your correspondent has been suffering from quite a heavy cold for several days past, and consequently "kept school" laboring under a cloud. But then he has tried to comfort himself with the reflection, that "a thing is never so bad, but it might be worse."

The thermometer of Henry Gerdson was at 24 below zero, on the morning of the 20th inst. and 14 below this morning.

Geo. B. Nilson, Esq., is taking solid ice from Auburn Lake, which ice is 30 inches thick. In view of this fact our friend "greatly rejoiceth."

The Teachers' association was very much favored, at its recent meeting held at Laketown, in having among them the Rev. W. H. Otter. Call often.

Owing to the breaking of the chain belonging to the 16 foot well of Henry Gerdson, the whole pump had to be taken out, causing some delay and trouble.

Fred Goldschmidt at last found water, after digging down a depth of 123 ft.

Fritz Schiffer will leave for Texas either this or next week, to take his timber land. Having secured his ticket, he will go by the way of St. Louis, Mo. His Laketown friends, one and all, heartily unite in saying "an revoir! Bon Journee, Fritz."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CRIMES AND CRIMINALS.

Charles W. Angell, the Pullman Car company defaulting secretary, left Philadelphia, Feb. 24th, in custody for Chicago.

J. Curry, charged with forging a $4,000 note on the bank at Botwinville, Ohio, has been arrested and $3,000 found on his person.

Don Platt, editor of the Washington Sunday Capital, on the evening of Feb. 20th, was assaulted in the Senate lobby by William McGarran and badly battered about the head and face. McGarran had taken umbrage at personal allusions to himself in Platt's paper.

A Port Worth special says: At 6 o'clock Sunday morning, Feb. 24th, the stage hence for Port Worth was halted inside the city limits by three masked hold-up men, two passengers compelled to give up their money, and the mail bags robbed of fourteen registered packages.

A St. Johns, N. B., telegram of Feb. 20th, says, Mrs. Ward whose sentence to death for complicity in the murder of her husband, was commuted to seven years imprisonment, has been released by order of the minister of justice. Her alleged accomplice, a Chicago telegraph of Feb. 27th, has the following: Charles A. Angell, defaulting secretary of the Pullman Car company has pleaded guilty in the criminal court on the two indictments against him, for larceny as bailor and embezzlement, and was sentenced by Judge Williams to ten years in the penitentiary, the full extent of the law. He made no remarks, manifested no emotion, and simply looked at the sentence as handed down. Judge Williams, in reviewing the case, spoke of the high social position occupied by Angell, the enormity of the offense, and the confidence reposed in him by the company, and expressed a belief that the full penalty, at least was deserved. Geo. M. Pullman visited Angell and had two hours talk with him, but refused to state its purport.

CASUALTIES.
February 27th, a $25,000 fire occurred at Parkersburg, W. Va., a $100,000 fire in New York city, and a $12,000 fire in Dubuque, Ia.

Taylorville, Tex., has been nearly destroyed by fire. 200 buildings were burned, leaving but four houses standing. Many families are homeless and destitute.

Twenty three Spanish sailors on their way from Peral to spend the carnival in their native village were drowned by the upsetting of their boat in a small bay.

The steamship Seal from Liverpool arrived at Baltimore Feb. 26th. The captain reports heavy gales during the entire voyage and the loss of the first and second officers.

On the evening of Feb. 26th the wife of J. B. Condon of Coalville, Webster county, Ia., locked her three children, 3 to 9 years of age, in the house, and during her absence a neighbor's house was burned, and the children perished in the flames.

A San Francisco telegram of Feb. 25th says, a Stockton, Cal., dispatch reports as follows: The coroner's jury found the recent explosion was caused by the steam engine being coming defective and failing to indicate the pressure of steam on the boiler, and the engine, depending on the gauge, was deceived as to the amount of steam he had generated. The furnace of the engine took fire, and the engine exploded. The banks, public schools, restaurants and business houses were closed, in conformity with the mayor's proclamation. The county and district courts adjourned also.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.
The President has vetoed the anti-Chinese immigration bill.

Gen. Meritt, the new collector at New York, has filed his bonds to the amount of $250,000.

Ex-Senator Henderson of Missouri is prominently spoken of in connection with the Berlin mission.

The students of Trinity college, Hartford, Ct. are in a state of rebellion. Some of their officers have been suspended.

Epiphany McGinnis has been confirmed by the United States Senate as collector of customs for the District of Minnesota.

The taking of testimony by the contestant in the Donnelly-Washburn contest, held at Minneapolis on the evening of Feb. 24th.

The California constitutional convention have adopted a resolution thanking congress for the passing the anti-Chinese immigration bill.

A number of clergymen of different denominations in St. Francisco have united in a petition to the President entreating him to sign the anti-Chinese immigration bill.

A dispatch from Rome of March 2d says: Prince Amadeus, Duke of Aosta, and his wife, the queen, will visit the Italian frontier. The king will visit her ex-jockey at Lake Maggiore.

A Southampton, Eng. telegram of Feb. 27th, says: The Empress Eugenie accompanied her son Prince Louis Napoleon, to the port, and witnessed his departure for the seat of war in South Africa.

Sensors Barnside and Conkling had an unceremonious, personal unpleasantness in executive session and would have come into blows, but for the interference of senators. There has been no reconciliation between them.

The Potter committee were in secret session at Washington, Feb. 28th, considering their report. Potter will submit the majority report. Hancock will present the views of the minority, and Gen. Butler will present a report of his own.

In case the President vetoes the anti-Chinese immigration bill, a murderous assault on the Chinese population San Francisco is anticipated. Gen. McComb, under instructions of the Governor of California, is taking precautionary measures.

A Portland, Oregon, telegram says that the settlers in Idaho have pursued the remnants of the Banquet raiding band into the Salmon River mountains and surprised and killed the entire camp, thirty-six in number. There is great rejoicing among miners and settlers at their annihilation.

On the evening of Feb. 25th, the President and Mrs. Hayes gave a reception to the cabinet, supreme court, the members of both houses of Congress, army and navy officers and heads of executive departments, who, with the ladies of their families, were invited to meet the members of the diplomatic corps.

The Pope replying to an address from the cardinals, emphasized his desire to reconcile the princes and people to the church, his readiness extended his hand to all who repent and cease their prosecution, and his intention always to combat in defense of the rights and independence of the church those who make war against her.

An item of $10,000 has been inserted in the sundry civil bill to pay D. T. Corbin, the expenses of contesting the seat in the Senate on South Carolina. Instead of $350,000 for confinement of the custom house and sub-treasury at Chicago, $350,000 is recommended for completion of the building, $500,000 instead of $750,000 for continuation of public building at Nashville, and $500,000 instead of $300,000 for completion of the public building at Topeka.

The Potter committee were in secret session at Washington, Feb. 28th. The agent sent to Tallahassee, Florida, to subpoena Sosa, reports that he is not to be found, and it is thought he has gone to Mexico. The question of presenting a report to Congress upon the evidence adduced came up, and after a long conversation the chairman was asked to submit his views with respect thereto on Friday next, to which day the committee adjourned. Gen. Butler will also present his views on the subject.

The committee of conference on the army appropriation bill, consisting of Senators Blaine, Allison and Withers and Representatives Hewitt, of New York, Sparks and Foster, held a prolonged session on Friday night, February 28th, and adjourned at a very late hour until tomorrow morning, without arriving at any agreement or feeling encouraged to expect any. In the opinion of the best informed members of the appropriation committee of both houses an extra session is now inevitable, and the prospects are generally gloomy.

Amended, was then passed, years 145, 152. A committee of conference on the appropriation bill was organized, and the House adjourned.

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

SENATE, Feb. 25th.—A telegram from the constitutional convention of California was presented by the Vice President under the rules, it not being properly authenticated, it was not received. The telegram thanked congress for passing the anti-Chinese immigration bill. The Senate refused to take up the telegram declaring David T. Corbin entitled to a seat in the Senate from South Carolina instead of M. C. Butler, years 25, 28, 31.

The deficiency appropriation bill was considered at length, and sundry amendments agreed to. Senator Paddock called up House resolution appropriating the death penalty to Representative Wells, of Nebraska, and after remarks on the life and character of the deceased, the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE, Feb. 25.—After preliminary business, the House went into committee of the whole on the legislative appropriation bill, the question being on the amendment repealing the law creating the office of electoral supervisors etc. A long discussion, 11:30 great spirit, of some personal invective, and of much particular feeling on both sides ensued, when the amendment was agreed to, years 125, 135, 110. The committee rose, and the bill and amendments were taken up.

After sundry amendments had been agreed to, the amendment repealing the laws in regard to United States supervisors etc. was taken up. A bitter struggle on the adoption of the amendment followed. The Republicans generally refused to vote. Dilatory motions were made. The vote on the amendment was announced, years 141, 122.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

SENATE, February 24, 1879.
Senate met at 7:30 p.m. Reading of the scriptures and prayer by Rev. E. R. Lathrop, of Zumbrota.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.
Senator C. D. Gilliland, to whom was referred the bill authorizing the issue of bonds to the city of St. Paul to the amount of $75,000 for the erection of a high school building, reported the same back with an amendment reducing the amount to $50,000.

HOUSE BILLS PASSED.
To amend the charter of Rush City, Chicago county.

HOUSE, February 21, 1879.
The House met at 7:30 p.m., Speaker Gilman in the chair.

The Senate bill to appropriate money for the support of the State prison and for repairs at the institution was submitted with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. Lathrop submitted the following minority report: We, the undersigned, members of the State prison committee, beg leave to make the following report to the honorable Speaker and House of Representatives, recommending the indefinite postponement of the Senate bill No. 16, for the following reasons:

That the appropriation for the new building (thousand $25,000) is a sufficient amount to meet all expenditures in building the new prison, and in conducting the same, and that it is not deemed it policy to make any more extensive appropriations. (Signed) A. M. FAIRLEY, W. B. LUTZ.

A long wrangle ensued, the Speaker holding that no such thing as a minority report could be recognized. The Speaker made a long speech in support of his position, and finally the report of the majority was adopted, and the project of the minority ordered to lie on the table.

Our Homestead.
BY PHOEBE CART.
Our old brown homestead reared its walls
From the rocky soil.
Where the apple blossoms bloom
And the cherry trees grow.
Then when awoke I lay
In the long room and heard the hum
As they creaked against the pine And those orchard trees; oh, those orchard trees—
I've seen my little brother In the tops of the summer brook.
The sweetest under the window sill,
When the early birds were glad,
And the dark darkness rose by the garden fence Were all the flowers left behind.
I've looked at many a dower since then But none so true and fair.
For those roses bright—oh, those roses bright, I've turned them with my sister's locks,
That are laid in the dust from sight.
We had a well, a deep old well,
And the cool spring was never dry;
And the cool drowsy down from the mossy slopes—
Were full of constant life.
And there never was a half so sweet As that in my little room.
Down on the curb by the rule old sweep Which my father laid out;
And the deep old well—oh, that deep old well!
I remember yet the splashing sound Of the bucket in the fall.
Our homestead had an apple heart,
Where at night we loved to meet;
There our mother's voice was always kind,
And her smile was a comfort to the heart.
And there I've sat on my father's knee And watched his faithful brow
With my childish hand on his raven hair—
That hair is silver now!
But that brother's light—oh, that broad heart's light—
And my father's look and my mother's smile,
They are in my heart to-night.

THE UNLUCKY HOUSE.
"That is the place, baillie. A very unlucky house, sir! I would not advise you to buy it."
"Pooh! You don't expect an old traveler like me to be influenced by such a bugbear?"
"That is between you and your own car, sir; but, to tell the truth, it is just because you have traveled, and seen many an up and many a down, that I expect you to be influenced by an uncanny name. It is the folks that have had changes, that have had a fore-knowledge, I'm not a superstitious man myself, but there are things worth minding—yes, indeed!"
The two men had checked their horses, before a large gray stone house, standing on the slope of a hill that would have been dreary in any eyes but those of Scotland. Ragged and bleak, with clumps of dark, stunted trees, and patches of dull heather invading the brown bare bits of pasture-ground. The dark house had been thickly planted with four generations overgrown any attempt at gardening there had ever been. In fact, nothing remained of it except a weedy, gravelly walk that led to a black lake, which spread its dark waters and was gradually lost in the bog and marshes around.
"Those hills in the background and this marshy outlook to the north, good sport, Baillie."
"Ah, but hills and red deer know many a thing beyond our kenning.
The deer have left the hills, and the hills have found canny places to build their dun, and the hills are not the same as they were. What do you call the place, Brodie?"
"I never called its name at all, sir.
More than a hundred years ago, a house called it 'Cross-baskie'—a very proper name, for every generation has seen its basket and store crossed more and more, till at last basket, store, and money-penny had all but empty."
"Who is the owner now?"
"Sholto MacNair. He's but a poor lad for a laird—aye, dawdling about the hills with a pencil, they say."
"I think I will go and see him. There is no harm in seeing the price of a place."
"You'll do your own bidding, Baillie, and it is none of my interest to say,
'Don't! Still you are my own cousin four times removed, and I would be loath to see you buy bad luck with good gold."
"I am not set on buying, Brodie. To tell the truth, I know this hill and the twenty five years ago, and I would like to see her son. Poor Grace Larimer!
You'll mind Grace Larimer, Brodie?" "I mind her well, baillie. She has been dead many a year now, and if you are want to see her son, a good day to you: it is little time I have for picking up dropped threads."
So the lawyer and his friend parted—the one trotting gently back to the city; the other, after tying his horse to the gate of the decaying house, sauntering thoughtfully toward its entrance.
His summons at the door was answered by an old woman, whose first greeting was anything but hospitable: "Ye needna ring, ye loud, sir; we're neither deaf nor dumb within."
"Can I see Mr. MacNair?"
"That depends on what's speaking for him. The laird cannot be intruded on by every one that has hair true than powder seems."

Then a door softly opened, and a young man in a loose, slovenly dress approached. "Walk in, sir," he said, in a manner that indicated at once the nervousness of the recluse and the courtesy of a natural gentleman.
There was a bright fire in the room into which he preceded his visitor, but it did little to relieve the air of utter decay and desolate neglect which was its prevailing character. The stone floor was partially covered with a ragged carpet, the furniture was broken and moth-eaten, the walls were stained with damp, and the dropping paper green with mildew.
The baillie felt a sudden chill, and it was difficult for a moment to state his errand. When at length it was done, the young laird sighed and answered:
"David? Yes, sir. She died a slow, weary death in this very room. Perhaps you were her friend?"
"So truly her friend that I would fain be a friend to her child," and he stood up and offered his hand with a frank, heavy manner quite irresistible to the sensitive young man. He was a young laird, apt to inspire a liking in a heart linking him with tender memories. He had a bright, spiritual face, set in soft dark curly hair, nose broad and Celtic blood, and the quick observation and sympathetic nature that is always ready to take a hint or develop a resource.
Consequently it was easy for a person disposed to be his friend to find out the best way to extend help. True, he had a youth's shame about poverty, but he had also youth's hope and youth's confidence in his own resources. He exhibited a kind of eager modesty, his numerous pictures and studies of Scotch life and scenery, and the old man knew enough to be aware that they showed signs of gentleness.

But it was not these pretensions which attracted him most; it was some papers lying loosely on the table, covered with quaint designs of flowers and stars and dots and crosses. He lifted these with the curiosity and the eye of one who thoroughly understands a subject and is greatly interested in it. Sholto blushed deeply, and nervously tried to draw off the visitor's attention. But the baillie seemed for a few minutes quite absorbed in the work and in his own thoughts.
Then he ejaculated: "Beautiful! Are these your designs, Mr. MacNair?"
"Yes, sir; I do little in that way sometimes. In fact, I am obliged to, until I can get my pictures into a proper market."

"Why, these designs are exquisite. To whom do you sell them?"
"John Orr buys all I make."
"No wonder their owner's name is such a sale! Sholto MacNair, if you will come into the city and design for me for two years, you will have money enough for Rome and the Rhine. What do you say?"
It was quite easy to persuade the young man that his pictures were not miserables, and that he ought to devote two years in the drudgery of money-making, in order that he might devote many years after them to travel and study.
But at length the baillie succeeded, and the wretched home was abandoned, and Sholto took his desk in the declining room of the great seated man in front of Baillie Archibald Allister.

It was about six months afterward that Lawyer Brodie called one evening on his cousin Allister. There was business of an important nature in the call, but after it had been completed, their conversation gradually drifted into a less personal and less selfish strain.
"How is Sholto MacNair getting along, Baillie?"
"He is doing well—earning money and working hard."
"Ha-ha! It is the fourth generation; maybe the curse lifts a little by this time.
'Unto the third and fourth generation—that how it reads, Baillie.'"
"I never rightly understood the matter, Brodie. This Ronald MacNair was a lawyer and a judge of the court of session—" "A scoundrel and a murderer of three or four kind, Baillie. My grandfather sat beside him on the bench for twenty years."

Then there was a pause, but Baillie Allister knew better than to break the spell of the flickering fire-light and of the sensitive expectant silence till upon the heart of the old lawyer, and presently he said, in a low, thoughtful voice: "I'll tell you, Baillie, what I know about it, and there is no one knows more, for we have done the MacNairs business nearly eighty years, though I am free to say it is quite against my ordinar to talk about my client."

"This Ronald MacNair was a black looking Highlandman, and son of Donald MacNair, as fierce and bad a man as ever ruled the MacNairs. I have known all to do with the quarrel between him and his father and elder brother, he was a bad man, but it had not been a 'dry quarrel,' but in those days the dark settled every dispute north of the Grampians, and a civilized folk hardly cared to interfere."

"Anyhow Ronald came southward with a dark name, and, strangely enough, with such a fierce spirit, entered into a quarrel with the house of Caldwell and Faulder. Some folks just hated his dark face and domineering ways, but my grandfather took to the proud Highlander wonderfully. I don't know what it was, less maybe that David MacMaister hated him, and David and my grandfather were born foes."

"They had no personal or particular quarrel, but David and Ronald had, for both of them fell in love with Bonnie Maggie Faulder—just as mad in love as two such poor, set-in-their-own-way fellows were like to be. Maggie's kind father, David, and Ronald swore if he married her, he might be a dirk with the wedding ring."

"Then old Faulder sent Maggie away to some southern friends, and David and Ronald went on to the roll of his majesty's attorneys, and both of them settled down to a pleasing career and attending to other people's business."
"But they were always watching one another; and when David was put up for some rich country office—clerk of the rolls, I think—Ronald was furious, and spent both time and gold freely in order to defeat him. I don't suppose he did it. Anyhow, his opponent, James Laing, won, and David was out of place and pocket.
Soon after, James Laing, was found dead in his office, with a dirk through his throat."

"Suspicion gathered swiftly and certainly around David MacMaister. He was, as I have said, before, a passionate and proud man. It would not be denied that he had spoken very bitterly of his opponent, and many a threat uttered. Singer was now remembered against him."
"It is a strange and imprisonment seemed almost to deprive him of his senses. He denied his guilt in the most solemn terms, but could give no account of himself during the hour in which the murder had been committed, except that he had been in liquor in his own room. This apology added little to his defense; and many even of his intimate acquaintances, believed him to be guilty."

"Probably because of the well-known fracture between the two men, the prosecution elected Ronald MacNair to conduct their case. Nothing so exciting as this trial had agitated every circle of society since the landing of Prince Charlie. Houses were divided, friends quarreled, and immense bets were laid on its issue."

"While it was pending Maggie Faulder returned, and Ronald was now doubtless anxious for the success of his prosecution. It was wonderful what science and industry and eloquence he brought to bear on it. His summing up and final speech electrified every one. There was a sudden and awful still, still the young laird sighed and answered:
"David? Yes, sir. She died a slow,
weary death in this very room. Perhaps you were her friend?"
"So truly her friend that I would fain
up and offered his hand with a frank,
sensitive young man. He was a young
linking him with tender memories. He
dark curly hair, nose broad and Celtic
to take a hint or develop a resource.
Consequently it was easy for a person fell asleep, for toward midnight he was aroused by a shake so powerful that he would have leaped to his feet, only that two brawny hands held him tight in his chair.

"In a moment his senses were all alert, and he saw, bending over him, a giant-like Highlander, in whose hands he knew even his strength would be as that of a baby."
"You are a Campbell, I know by your plaid. Now what do you want with me?"
"Still, and don't move an inch, while I tell you. I killed James Laing!
I killed him because, while he was shooting on the braes of Angus last year, he strangled my sister so deeply that I be-hooved to kill her too. I watched until all his new followers had gone; then I walked into his room and put my dirk through his throat. I had wronged to right, and I righted them; but the man you spoke against to-day knows nothing of the matter. I don't want to murder him too. Tell the police that the man who killed James Laing is in Alexander Campbell. They can look for him in Bute; maybe they will find him, and maybe they will not."

"Without another word he was gone, and Ronald was so shocked to detain him, even if he had the power. However, he made no spontaneous effort, and when reflection came he determined not to do it. He could not now give up his triumph; he knew the temper of popular feeling, and was sure that David's innocence assured, David would become the popular idol. He had labored for his ruin—how could he now give up his object? And then he thought of Maggie, and that thought decided him."

No, nothing should now induce him to retrace his steps.
"The next morning in court he had another chance to clear his soul. The prisoner had received from some person in the press a paper assuring him that Ronald had been notified of his innocence, and would proclaim it in the court.
David begged the officer to pass this paper over to Ronald, and he eagerly scanned his face while he read it. The two enemies looked at one another with a start, and then Ronald, with a scornful smile, tore the paper into fragments."

"No David was sentenced that day, and in due season he was with all the circumstances of barbarity and indignity common to the last act of the law. If Ronald felt himself a murderer, he did not show it, and no visible judgment to loved his crime. He rose calmly in his profession, married Maggie Faulder, built up his house at Crossbaskie, and was finally made one of the lords of session."
"But long before this some people had begun to notice that he was a haunted man. I say 'some people,' because there are men and women that are just jumps of clay, and never see anything beyond their own meat and money."

"A haunted man, Brodie! What do you mean?"
"Just what I say, Allister. The man he had hung called him from bed and board and bench, and he was compelled to go. His face turned gray as ashes with terror and mortal agony, and the several told strange tales of cries and voices and of fierce grays, which left their master more dead than his victims. The great ones that came some grand Latin help; but the man was far beyond their help."

"One night he was awfully wretched and restless, and instead of being out of the company of his eldest grandson, a bright lad of three years old. At midnight there was the old struggle and the old cries, and the child ran sobbing down the great stairs, and crying with a terror that he never could explain; for it was not likely he could describe in the language of this world things that belonged to another one."

"And Ronald MacNair?"
"Was found dead this time, and his room is locked to this day. The little lad present at that last awful struggle faded away, and died of the fever, and the memory of that hour into every hour of his life, and I think that he never either hoped or tried to avert the poverty and sorrow he believed to be the just retribution for his crime. He was a pious man, but held the world's goods with a loose grasp. Sholto, you say, is prudent and world-wise."

"He was not against him but his constant haunter after work that will never pay him. Nobody cares for his historical paintings and picture castles, Brodie."
"No, nor why should they? Tell him to paint portraits; every one thinks his own face makes the best picture." But in a few months Baillie Allister had an of her Po and

har. So pro and

be an

with her house."

"She has heard that Ronald MacNair deliberately kept back facts which would have saved her great-uncle from a shameful and early death; but she knows that Sholto MacNair had neither part nor lot in that, and that he would die himself rather than hurt a hair of her head."

"She is but a working girl, Sholto."
"I am not fit to touch her hand, Baillie, she is that nobly born, and I hope, for my mother's sake, you will bless our bride!"

So Sholto and his wife went to Rome, and the old house of Crossbaskie grew every year more dreary and melancholy-looking. Nobody asked to rent it, nobody came to see it, and the garden grew so upon the garden every year that people began to prophesy the place would eventually be swallowed up by the bog and water.

For some time little was heard of Sholto. The baillie thought it a good sign. "The lad," he said, "is happy with his wife, and busy with his brush." Events justified his opinion, for Sir Thomas McGilvray, lord provost of Edinburgh, having gone to Italy in the seventh year of Sholto's absence, brought back with him a wonderful painting of the broken-hearted King James entering Edinburgh after the woful field of Flodden; and Sholto MacNair was the artist.

For while the fame of the works of Sholto spread, and Baillie Allister and Brodie went purposely to Edinburgh to see it. "A wonderful picture," they both allowed, but the lawyer grumbled a little at the subject. "It is just as easy," he said, "to choose a triumph as a disaster. The MacNairs are kin to all luck, I think."

Perhaps the lawyer never said anything that had so speedy a refutation, for the very next day the baillie had an offer which caused him to write to Sholto and urge his immediate return to Scotland. In a few weeks after this he was riding once more out to Crossbaskie; but this time Sholto and "Lady Jennie" and their two daughters were with him. They wandered through the old house, which even in the bright sunshine had an weird, mournful, uninhabitable look, and Sholto grew strangely silent, and Jennie shuddered and gathered her children close to her.

It was the last time they were ever to see the old walls, for Sholto had sold house and lands to the city for £80,000, and the house was to be razed, and the marsh drained, and the hills and demesne fields laid out in pleasure-grounds for the burghers of the great city.

Englishmen Who Have Left Large Fortunes.

The obviously eccentric old Earl of Dysart, who it may be presumed, because of some to melancholy at last, as he left a personal estate of $5,000,000, the largest ever left behind him by an English peer, although it had been surpassed by many mercenary men. The late duke of Cleveland, who left over a million sterling, came nearest. Lord Westminster regarded as the Crossus par excellence, and left £4,000,000. No Englishman has yet come within $1,000,000 of Mr. Brassey, the great contractor. Mr. Morrison, of Fore Street (Morrison, Dillon & Co.), comes nearest with $300,000,000, and having the extent of his landed property, was probably the wealthiest Englishman who has ever made his own fortune. For several years before his death he continued his habit of giving £100,000 a year to the poor, and he left a legacy of one million sterling, the only such legacy on record in the London probate court.

It is an interesting circumstance to record that all the sons of Mr. Brassey and Mr.
Morrison have turned out well. Two of the former and one of the latter are members of Parliament. None are in business, and the latter is a member of the House of Commons. The late duke of Cleveland left the largest share to the eldest, and between $50,000 a year to the next, and between $50,000 and $100,000 a year to the third. To the daughter £250,000. To his widow he left $50,000 a year and two residences. The contents of his principal abode, Basilston Park, were sworn for probate duty at $450,000.
The duke's principal residence was a house specially designed for them by Sir Charles Eastlake, for Mr. Morrison, although he rose from the foot of the ladder, was not the military and aristocratic, and distinguished members of the Royal Academy were constant guests at his house. He lived very handsomely, and quite without ostentation, but his house was criss-crossed with the most refined and beautiful things. His second son, Mr. Alfred Morrison, whose residence on Carlton Terrace is one of the finest in London, has inherited this taste and spends many thousands a year in golfing and in his Y. Times.

Two Anecdotes of the Second Empire.
Paris Letter to New Orleans Courier.
Granier de Cassagnac has begun to publish a history of the second empire.
He is already extremely interesting.
He was in the green room during the whole performance of the imperial drama, and few if any secrets were withheld from him. He tells a very amusing anecdote of Thiers and Mole. They pressed Louis Napoleon to cut off his mustache as the surest way to secure his election to the presidency, "for now the election is in the hands of the people, and the mustache is a barrier to the people." Here is another very characteristic anecdote: "In 1848 he charmed the women of Paris. He had a fine, open, and nature. He had come incoincidentally to Paris and visited the ruins which Gen. Cavagnac's cannon had made in this quarter of Paris. It was the 24th of June, and the great artist, General Cavaignac, had granted the insurgents. The woman of Rue des Faubourg St. Antoine, less fanciful and more practical than their husbands, brothers, or children, were at every busy demolishing barricades.

ing the street, walking calmly and in consequence of the obstacles of his which encumbered the street, a leaning on a friend's arm. He delicate straw-colored gloves, ear-cane, and observed them with his good

Here and There.

The funeral of Louis Schmidt was largely attended on Tuesday.

Our brick yards use up about 4000 cords of wood during the brick season.

Our popular post master, spent a portion of the week in Minneapolis, taking in the Iliad Opera. He was pleased.

The prospect for new buildings in Chaska the coming summer is very flattering indeed, already quite a number are preparing to build.

We will soon know who are the successful mail contractors.

We are pleased to hear that the bill respecting our friend Capt. Thos. R. Hunt, formerly of this place, to his old rank in the army, passed both houses of Congress, and has become a law, and Maj. Strait informs us that the Secretary of War, will no doubt assign Capt. Hunt to duty at once.

District Court.

The spring term of the District Court for this County will convene on Monday, April 1th. There are quite a number of important civil cases on the calendar; the criminal calendar is almost clear. The list of jurors for the term appears elsewhere in the local column.

Henry Fabel & Co's Store Closed.

Sheriff DuToit, closed the store of Henry Fabel & Co. last Friday afternoon, on an execution of St. Paul creditors.

Mr. Fabel has been very unfortunate in business, and has the sympathy of the community at large.

His liabilities foot up some $1500, while his stock inventories at about the same amount.

DIED.

At the residence of his son, Christian Smith, in the town of Laketown, J. Geo.
Smith, aged 70 years, on Monday evening March 17th 1879.

Mr. Smith was one of our oldest and most highly respected citizens. He came to this County in the year 1854, and settled in Laketown pre-empting the same piece of land now owned by his son. He leaves one son, Christian and three daughters.

His funeral will take place from the Moravian Church, Laketown, to-day at 10 o'clock. It will be largely attended as Mr. S. was held in high esteem by his old neighbors.

FARMERS HAIL INS. CO.

There will be a meeting of all those interested in organizing a "Farmers Hail Insurance Co.," at Poppitz Hall, in Laketown on Monday, March 21st, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m., at which it is expected that all friends of the enterprise will be present.

By order of the Committee.

Peevish children have worms. Dr. Jaque's German Worm Cakes will destroy the worms and make the children happy.
Sold by Jos. Franken.

COUNTY BOARD.

The Board of County Commissioners met in session Tuesday morning, and having a good deal of business will probably not adjourn until Saturday noon.

NOTICE TO FARMERS!

We call the attention of our readers to the important announcement of Wm. Seeger & Son, of the Chaska Elevator. They will clean all wheat brought by them, free of charge, returning all screenings to the farmers, and in grading, will use the half bushel measure if preferred by the farmers.

CORRECTION.

Michael Schuler, was elected one of the supervisors of the town of Chandalens, instead of Peter Moschenberg, as published in last week's issue—we were mis-informed in the first issue.

WACONIA MILL.

We wish to inform the farmers of Waconia and vicinity, that we will grind crack wheat for farmers on Tuesday and Wednesday of each week. We grind the wheat brought us by the farmers and do not exchange. Come and give us a trial.

BODY OF LOUIS SCHMIDT FOUND.

The body of Louis Schmidt, son of Mathias Schmidt, of this city, who ran away from home last November, an account of which was published in the HERALD at the time, was found in the Minnesota river, on the Scott County side, midway between this place and Carver, last Sunday afternoon, by some boys.

He must have thrown himself into the river this side of Carver and his body arose to the surface of the water just as the river froze over, and if the body had been found before the looking up of the river, the chances are that it would have been ground to pieces by the floating ice.

An inquest was held on the body at Shakopee on Monday, and the following verdict rendered by the jury. "That Louis Schmidt came to his death by means unknown to the jury."

He was buried on Tuesday.

Uncle Sam's Harness Oil put on your harness, will make the leather look new, and keep it soft and pliable. Give it a MARRIED.

At the West Union Church, Carver Co. on the 14th day of March A. D. 1879, by the Rev. A. Jackson, Mr. George Cole, to Miss Louisa E. Peterson, oldest daughter of Juan Peterson, Esq., both of the town of San Francisco.

We join with the many friends of the young couple in wishing them a long, prosperous and happy life.

BURIED.—Jacob Zimmermann, of this township, lost an infant child last Wednesday. The funeral takes place to-morrow, Friday.

Men with all his endowments, in many things most foolish, he will give all he has to his life, he is reckless and indifferent to his health. He will grapple a thief who steals his purse, yet will dilly with cough and cold, and in the end go into consumption, when such a sure remedy as Ellert's Expectorant of Tar and Wild Cherry can be easily obtained. It performs a cold, cures, gives strength at every step, and is invaluable in bronchitis and lung diseases. It is a safe guard for all from the babe to the venerable age and health will be restored by its timely use. No family should be without it. It will cure you. Sold by all Druggists.

By an explosion in a Potteryville, Pa., shaft, eleven men were instantly killed, and one seriously, and another slightly injured.

Many avalanches have recently occurred in the Austrian Tyrol, at Biberach. Ten houses have been crushed, forty persons killed, and 18 seriously injured, and 15 missing.

Wealthy and influential parishioners of Father Vay of the Irish Catholic church of Milwaukee allege grave charges against him, and petition Bishop Henne for his removal.

A terrible prairie fire recently occurred in Republic and Cloud counties, Kansas. They extended over an area ten miles long and three miles wide, and swept everything before them. It is said about one hundred houses were consumed, also large quantities of grain, farming implements, hay and other products. The winds were so high and the fires so fierce and hot that the inhabitants were obliged to take refuge in cellars dug out on underground habitations. But one life is reported lost, that of Mrs. Burrows, who was burned to death while attempting to rescue some horses from a burning stable. Several other persons were severely injured. Loss estimated at $40,000.

The foot-hill Paul Boynton had a narrow escape from death March 20. The swift current of the falls of the Ohio swept him by Louisville, Ky. He was severely injured.

The report of the board of enquiry in the case of Gen. Fitz John Porter has been sent by the secretary of war to the President. The conclusions arrived at by the board have been transpired.

The national executive committee of the national greenback party has issued an address to the people of the United States, in which they state that no dependence is to be placed on the promises of the party in power, and that the hope for financial relief within old party lines has been extinguished, and that they have been in several instances misled by the nominees of party and others who obtained its support. It is only possible through a new organization to found a party which shall accomplish the desired end, and to secure this end a uniform effort must be made, and a political party must be dependent and uncompromising must be taken.

The sudden death of Rev. Dr. McKown dean of the Rolla, Wis. college of apostle is announced. At 9 o'clock March 19th, deceased was in excellent health and came out with a student, when suddenly he exclaimed, "Help me, please," then fell back into the chair unconscious and died within ten minutes. Dr. McKown was about 47 years of age, and had been connected with the Rolla college for the past twenty years. The call he recently received from St. Mark's church, Philadelphia, he declined only the day before his death. His death is attributed to overwork and anxiety since his accident about six weeks ago, at which time he fell and broke his leg.
